To Whom it may concern,

Prior to the CellarControl system I had several procedures in place which limited our beer wastage when performing the cleaning of the beer lines. That being said I personally could not be there each week to oversee or do the cleaning of the beer lines myself so we still ended up with wastage. The sum of the wastage was a concern but not my main concern, and when I received information regarding the CellorControl System I could see the potential of saving a considerable amount of money with water consumption charges and sewer usage charges, chemical supplies, wages and with the lines only needing to be cleaned monthly or every 6-weeks I could dismiss the other concern being 'I hope the lines have been cleaned thoroughly and with minimal wastage' I cannot give an informed monetary annual saving at this time due to the system only being installed for 6-months but even with the increase in rates last year, I have been able to save over the last 6-months a couple of thousand dollars just with the water bills.

In regards to beer savings: prior to the CellarControl System installed I would have conducted at least 20 beer line cleans and wasted in total around 100 litres of beer in that time, instead I have only conducted 5 beer line cleans over the last 6-months with a loss of beer only minimal being 12 litres. Regarding chemical cost, I have not needed to place one order regarding beer line cleaning solutions and with wages I have been able to save in excess of 60 hours in labour and that's not including the change I was able to make to a rotating roster for my fulltime and cellar employees.

I personally do not believe that the quality of the beer has changed but saying that, I have been informed by several members that they believe the beer has been better than ever over the last 6-months, so if that's their perception I'm more than happy with it.

This is a great opportunity to make considerable monetary savings in your establishment and I highly recommend given the CellarControl System a go.
